For over 30 years, Todd Samara lived and painted in Kingston's Rondout neighborhood, translating its hilly streets, tight rows of 19th-century gable-roofed houses, sailboats, bridges and panoramic river and mountain views into poetic visions characterized by simplified, textured forms and rich, glowing color. To preserve his legacy, two Kingston galleries are hosting exhibitions of his work in October, which will precede an auction of more than 300 of his paintings in November.

The exhibitions at The Lace Mill located at 165 Cornell Street and The Storefront Gallery located at 93 Broadway, will open on Saturday, October 6, from 5 to 8 pm.

Businesses with Samara's works on their walls will also be open to visitors during the 1st Saturday gallery openings. They include:

- Dolce at 27 Broadway
- Downtown Cafe at 91 Broad
- A.I.R. Studio Gallery at 71 O'Neil St.
- Nina Silverman Physical Therapy at 111 Maiden Lane
- Tony's Pizzeria at 582 Broadway, which has a couple of stunning murals.
